Chain Reaction In Asian Flu

Number of cases of Asian Ru in the United States now approaches the half million mark. The total, of course, doesn't include new cases only. It includes those who have had it since the invader first appeared in July and recovered

What the statistics point up is that the virus is here, and it gets around. Its contagiousness is very marked. The disease spreads by a chain reaction-like an atomic reactor, a fire or chain letters-until greater immunity is developed. It breeds, rabbit-like, by geometrical progression, each case producing others and each of these producing others.

Eventually widespread immunity develops, the number of cases drops, and there is no more talk of an epidemic.

There is no cause for panic. For most of those who contract Asian flu, it will be just one more of those respiratory attacks to which they are regularly subject during the cooler months of the year. But for a few it will be severe, with danger of secondary attacks from some other bug that may prove fatal because of their weakened condition.

Indications still are that an individual's chances of dying in 1957 from Asian influenza are much smaller than his chances of being killed in an automobile accident. If enough persons take advantage of the vaccine against Asian flu as soon as it is available, the national epidemic that seems inevitable will be much less

The Confessionals

There seems to be a fashion these days of confes- known has at last been made sions in newsprint in which the aging or the shop- obvious in the recent official worn disclose to the public their own wickedness which acknowledgement of the existis only debasing and sometimes the wickedness of their fathers and their mothers which is sinful. Some it must be done for the money in it, but were such to see how radar with such a elf-abasing confessions not fashionable, there would be range can detect missile firings no money in it.

In the matter of George Raft, the character of his confession now concluding in "The Saturday Evening Post" and which presumably will be a book and a motion picture, indicates to me, as an old hand at human wickedness, that Raft has submitted to direct and indirect blackmail, that he has grown weary of it and now puts everything in black and white, even much that the blackmailers could not know, so that there will be nothing more to blackmail him about.

Raft differs from Diana Barrymore in the environmental accidents of his childhood. The Barrymores were the aristocrats of the theater who had moved over from what was in Maurice Barrymore's time, a forbidden profession for the gentility to John's time when he married into high society and social punctiliousness. I knew John somewhat and knew him as a cynic who really believed that all the world's a stage and those who trod its boards were puffed up idiots who took themselves too seriously.

Most of our acquaintance took place in Luchow's Restaurant where he liked to go for undiluted beer and where I liked to go for fattening foods. Barrymore was with the same person most of the time. Not being nosey about such matters, I do not know whether she was a wed wife or a devoted companion. Whichever it was, he was without doubt sarcastic about the companionship of December and April and I found such conversation brilliant despite its alcoholic content.

I do not find his daughter's confessions equally brilliant because about them there is neither gaiety nor tragedy, only narrative, the desire to tell all, like that French girl who had the motorcar accident because she was in a rush to live the whole of her life in three or four years between puberty and maturity which in this country is called the teen-age.

Self-exposure is a normal characteristic of a degenerate era. In wholesome periods, human beings have pride. They have what the Chinese, when they were civilized, called "face." It is in the up-growing periods that the proprieties are pursued. Think of the greatness of England in the times of Queen Victoria and the smallness of Great Britain in the era when a commission advocates that homosexuality be legalized and the pound sterling goes down to next to nothing. Perhaps that is why Soviet Russia is puritanical and discourages the idea of bathing beauties. They do not need a Jayne Mansfield to mark an age when they can beat us in launching a moon.

At any rate, it is something to think about, particularly when one is told to meet the times and to understand the times and that times change. Of course, time never changes; it is eternal. What does change is taste. For instance, it is not difficult to realize how tastes have changed when Princeton University, the center since colonial days of American Presbyterianism, finds it academic freedom to open its doors to Alger Hiss but rejects he God-fearing, God-loving criticisms of Father Augh Halton, John Calvin and John Knox would not understand the atheism of some of the professors, just as those professors do not realize that they are not talking to themselves but to immature boys who have yet to grasp that the new developments in science only confirm the unity of life and that therefore it is not possible to veto either monism or monotheism in the year 1957. It is too late for that. Einstein realized that the day of reconciliation between science and religion was at hand and so wrote in his "Out Of My Later Years." Maybe had he lived longer he would have turned completely from Marx to Moses, a possibility indicated in this book.

The point is that when taste becomes so vulgar that its ugliness appalls, we are on the verge of a change of taste, a period when beauty enchants.

When Nighthood Was In Flower

Now Is Time For Government To Tell Truth

By Stewart Alsop

WASHINGTON

The Soviet satellite launching, coming on the heels of the Soviet intercontinental missile test, poses a simple question: Will the American government now tell the American people the blunt, unpleasant truth about the race for the decisive weapons of the future, the ballistic missiles?

In recent years, the American government has followed a conscious policy of concealing or muffling the facts about that race. The Government, moreover, has not had to guess about the facts. It has known the facts, without the slightest room for doubt.

How the Government has ence of a radar tracing system with a range of 3000 miles. It is only necessary to look at a map anywhere in the Soviet Union. The tracking system makes it possible to detect, not only the firing of a Soviet missile, but the place of origin, the area of impact, the altitude, velocity, and general configuration.

No Surprise

The recent Soviet announcement of the firing of an intercontinental missile (which was in fact far more strategically significant than the satellite launching) came as no surprise to the Government. For the radar system had already picked up the tracks of multi-staged, longrange ballistic missiles fired from the Soviet missile testing center in Semipalatenak, east of the Urals. The missiles, which had an "operational configuration, and ranges well over 4000 miles, were fired in the direction of the Bering Sea. (This explains, incidentally, why the Soviets closed their eastern approaches to foreign shipping.)

When the Soviets announced their history-making achievement of an ICBM, although they were quite aware that the Soviet announcement was accurate, high No Effort To Alert Administration officials competed with each other in down-grading and muffling its true meaning. This was a learned reaction, as the psychologists say, for the policy of concealing or muffling the facts actually began years

In 1953, and more strongly in 1954, the intelligence reported that the Soviets had begun testing medium range ballistic missiles. As a result of these reports the radar tracking system was established in 1955. Almost on the day it opened for business, the radar system began to pick up numerous flight tests of Soviet missiles, thus confirming absolutely the previous intelligence tests reached the truly astonishing rate of five a month and

For reasons which will be examined in another report, this country failed to embark on a really serious missile effort until 1954. Thus the American government has known beyond question that the Soviet strategic missile project had already reached the testing stage before the equivalent American effort even got under way. But no effort of any sort was made to alert the country to the true meaning of this situation, or to require of the country the kind of massive effort needed to overcome the So-

The American government has known plenty of other facts, well known to the Soviets, but concealed from this country. It has known, for example, from the configuration and performance of tary of State.

The amazing power of the Soviet motor explains why the Soviets were able to launch a satellite weighing nine times as much as the proposed American satellite - an achievement correctly described by American scientists as "fantastic." Meanwhile, American achievements in the missile field, which have been distinctly short of fantastic, have been grossly over-played.

In recent months, three strictly non-operative medium missiles have been test-fired-this in comparison with literally dozens of Soviet test-firings, starting back in 1953-54. Two "Atlas" test vehicles have also been unsuccess fully test-fired. But these abortive firings were simply tests of the initial, or first-stage rocket, designed to fly less than 3000 miles. Even when this first-stage rocket has been successfully fired, the problems of "marrying" the second stage to the first, of atmospheric re-entry, and of accurate guidance, remain to be resolved and flight-tested. short, we are much further away from testing a prototype of a true intercontinental ballistic missile than the country has been led to believe.

All the evidence, in short, clearly indicates that the Soviets are frighteningly far ahead of this country in the race for the decisive weapons of the future. Given this country's immense industrial power, there is no reason on God's earth why they should stay ahead. But they will certainly stay ahead if the policy of the American government continues to be to bury the essential facts in great dollops of soothing syrup. It is time to tell the country the blunt truth, and the responsibility for so doing rests where it has always rested, with the President of the United

Surgery To Replace Hardened Leg Arteries

By Dr. Theodore R. Van Dellen

Not long ago I asked a physician what was new in the treatment of poor circulation. "It's all surgical," he replied. "Nowadays, when the leg arteries give out, they are replaced by a new set. It's too bad we can't do the same with the heart, liver, and brain." His remarks were somewhat exaggerated but the blood is reduced to a trickle or stops suddenly. In other persons the obstruction is confined to a short segment of the artery and this is the type that responds best to surgery.

The plugged segment is cut out and replaced by an arterial graft. Some of these grafts are obtained from the artery bank. Other patients are given a plastic artery.

In another type of operation, the arterial graft is inserted into the hardened vessel so that it bypasses the obstructed area. This is considered the best technique and is most used. If the graft fails to take, the obstructed segment is not affected and in this respect the basic condition remains unchanged.

The plugged area of the artery can be demonstrated by injecting a dye that outlines the arterial tree when X-rayed (arteriogram). These operations are not advised unless the obstruction is confined to a small segment of a larger artery, distress is severe, and the leg is in danger of becoming gangrenous. Otherwise, medicines are presribed to encourage new blood vessels to grow and take the place of the old. This is a slow and time consuming process.

Bargaining Power With Gromyko

of prestige and power-the prestige of his background and the power of having the H-bomb, the A-bomb, and the greatest air force in the world.

Last week, however, that situation was reversed. As these two men sat down in Dulles's colonial mansion overlooking Rock Creek, our Secretary of State found himself talking to a man whose country had developed the intercontinental ballistic missile, a new jet transport, and an earth satellite which electrified the world

I do not know the specific details of what the two men talked about, but I do know that before they began talking this was what faced John Foster Dulles. This was why he asked Gromyko to sit down face to face.

1. The Turkish Ambassador had been calling at the State Department repeatedly to warn that Turkey was not going to stand still while Russia built up a vast arms race in Syria to the south, and kept a Russian fleet three times the size of the U.S. 6th Fleet to the north in the Black

2. Turkish Prime Minister Menderes hinted to the American Embassy in Ankara that Turkey might take things into its own hands regarding the big Russian arms base in Syria unless President Eisenhower makes a bold move to halt Russian expansion in the Near East.

3. The Lebanese Government has informed the State Department that there will be little use having a NATO army protecting western Europe from Russia, if Russia takes over the Near East and can cut off oil to supply the NATO army, plus oil to supply the factories of Europe.

War Barely Averted

These ambassadors and prime ministers were not kidding.

When the Prime Minister of Turkey talked about moving in on Syria, the State Department knew he meant it. For, one month ago, Turkey almost marched on the Syrian city of Aleppo. And the American public never knew how close the Near East was to war in mid-Septem-

One reason the Turks didn's move in is because they haven't been able to get assurances from the United States of NATO support in case the Russian fleet started bombarding the Turkish coast in support of its satellite.

The State Department hasn't said yes, and it hasn't said no. . It just hasn't said anything. It doesn't want to see our good friend and ally, Turkey, squeezed between a Russianized Syria on. the south and the Russian fleet on the north. But at the same time it doesn't want to risk a world war.

That's one of the reasons John Foster Dulles had to talk with Andrei Gromyko.

Russian Timetable

The Rusisan timetable in the Near East has not been published, but Arab diplomats friendly to the west feel sure they know what it is.

It is first of all to consolidate Russian gains in Syria: develop airports, the harbor of Latakia. highways, irrigation projects; and make that country a model Arab state, completely dependent on Russia. Once Syria is certain of Russian support, here is the schedule.

A. Syria will work through agents in Jordan to assassinate or overthrow King Hussein. Then the new government of Jordan will propose a union with Syria. Since this will be an internal move, not foreign aggression, it won't come under the Eisen. hower Doctrine. We couldn't in-

B. Six months later, King Saud will be assassinated. He was nearly assassinated last spring and another attempt on his life was made last month. Crown Prince Faisal, the King's brother, who doesn't particularly like the King, will succeed him and move for unity with Syria.

C. The tiny country of Lebanon, half Christian, half Moslem, will be relatively easy to take over next.

D. Iraq, bigger, richer, and a member of the Baghdad Pact, will be tougher to absorb, but the Russian timetable calls for it tobe annexed to Syria in about 18 months.

Case Of Jitters!

By David Lawrence

WASHINGTON-What a strange case of jitters has swept the most powerful country in the world! The Soviets shoot a rocket 560 miles up in the air and send a ball spinning into space and everybody forgets that the U.S. Army sent a rocket 600 miles into the air a year ago. It went 3,600 miles across the earth's surface and just didn't happen to have a ball attached to it to be flung into space. Yet today the emphasis is on the fact that the Soviets have the power to fire guided missiles across continents, and presumably America doesn't. This is supposed to terrify the American people and tell them that Russia has intercontinental missiles and America had better bow in humble submission. The truth is that, in the game of missiles, much progress has been made by science in many countries and the question of whether one nation can fire a missile farther than another is already academic. In due time the mysteries of the missile will be as well known as the capacity of the H-bomb to destroy cities. Also the next step — the interception of missiles - is a counter-

Some of the hysterical reaction arising in the United States from the Soviet announcement was promptly noted in the Soviet press. Immediately there were demands that America "change" her foreign policy and agree to "coexistence." This is but another way of demanding that the Soviet policy be accepted. This means infiltration wherever the Communists wish and continued enslavement of hundreds of milliens of people.

Nazis Recalled

Judging from some of the comments in America, there are persons who feel the only thing to do is to surrender to the Russians and forget about any possible resistance. One is reminded of the tales told in the 1930's by those prominent visitors who were invited to see the Nazis' air strength and their armored divisions. These observers immediately counseled that there was no use resisting such military power and that it was better to try to "do business with Hitler."

Unquestionably the Soviets have pulled off a propaganda stunt which is dramatic to the extreme. But American foreign policy is not usually upset by propaganda.

The position of the United States against the Soviets was outlined in four hours of conversation by Secretary of State Dulles to Andrie Gromyko, the Soviet foreign minister, last Saturday. Their on the day after the first anlaunching of a space ball. From meeting in Washington occurred nouncement of the Soviet's what has been learned here since, the Soviets showed in that conference no signs of forwarding the cause of peace. Their policies presumably are based on the theory that democracies are weak and fickle and will be swayed by propaganda stunts. There are bound to be certain consequences in the other direction — a stiffening of American policy. Instead of assuming that military preparation can be cut down through "disarmament" discussions, there will be a tendency here to urge larger appropriations for armament. The 'economy drive' of the last session of Congress may lose some momentum now. The funds for scientific research will be increased, though sometimes an abundance of money is no substitute for concentrated and wellcoordinated research.

Aerial Inspection

Perhaps the most interesting aspect of the new revelation is the confirmation it gives of the wisdom of President Eisenhower's aerial inspection program, It has been known for some time. that airplanes could fly at tremendous heights and avoid detection. They can photograph from the sky and go unmolested. The theory that one government will not permit another government to tly planes over its territory without permission seems to have been abandoned by the Russians in their latest exploit. They were supposed to have announced in advance, for scientific reasons, their intention to traverse the air over America, but they didn't.

One wonders what the Soviets would have said if an American contrivance had been sent spinning over Russian territory. Maybe the Soviets have unwittingly created a precedent for future reconnaissance through the air. They have been arguing that twelve to thirty miles is the territorial limit horizontally. It migh be contended now that vertically there is no national sovereignty over space way up high in the heavens.

Two Area Schools Hard Hit By Illness; Maryland Students Get 4-Day Respite

Beall, Romney Curtail Activity

FROSTBURG - Students at Beall High School will have a four-day respite before having to return to school. Officials of the school hope that the epidemic that hit there this week will have abated by that time. Nearly 400 of the 900 students were absent

Due to the large number of illnesses, many activities were curbed this week. A dance scheduled by the Tri-Hi-Y and the Hi-Y clubs was postponed, an assembly planned for the eighth grade Wednesday was cancelled when only 14 of the 52 participants were present and the football game scheduled between Beall High and Romney was postponed until Monday evening.

Wayne W. Hill, principal, also pointed out that yearbook and senior pictures were taken this week but that due to the large number of seniors absent, the photographer will return Monday. All seniors who have not had their pictures taken have been requested to come Monday, dressed for the occasion. Those not having pictures taken then will have to go to the studio in Cumberland, the principal said. Isolated Situations

The epidemic of flu and colds at Beall appeared to be a local situation, as other schools in the Midland county did not come close to the unusual number of absentees from classes. However, in Romney, W. Va., 20 per cent of the of school due to colds and flu.

18-Ton Girders Are Set In Place

Cranes this week began easing into place the 18-ton girders which will form the deck of the prestressed concrete bridge across Evitts Creek on Route 51.

Crews began Tuesday morning to set the big I beams in place on foundations prepared by the local construction firm.

The big beams were prestressed and cast of concrete in Winchester. Va., and brought here by truck.
